Not illustrated. 1841 Excerpt: .tribe, the Khoshud, live on the banks of the Lower Volga, on both sides of the river. The first tribe is the most numerous, consisting of 12,000 kybitkas, or families; the four latter, taken together, probably fall short of the number. In summer a part of them live chiefly on the produce of the chase, of which the saiga antelopes are the principal object, but in winter they depend only on their herds. They wander about with their flocks and herds in the immense steppes. In a country which has hardly a few patches of cultivable land, the Calmucks by able management have succeeded in maintaining horses, cattle, camels, sheep, and goats to the number of three millions of heads. The value of the goods exported from their country to other parts of Russia is estimated at one million and a half of rubles. They consist...
